Reporting Resources

Confidential Reporting for Sexual Misconduct

If a student or employee desires to keep the details of an incident of sexual harassment, sexual assault, relationship violence or stalking (collectively, “sexual misconduct”) confidential, he or she should speak with a confidential resource, i.e., individuals who have a legal obligation to keep communications confidential when acting in their professional capacity, unless there is an imminent threat to health or safety, or other basis for disclosure pursuant to law (e.g., JHU Counseling Center, the Johns Hopkins Student Assistance Program, the Faculty and Staff Assistance Program, the University Staff Psychologist – Sexual Assault Specialist (victim’s advocate), chaplains at the Bunting Meyerhoff Interfaith and Community Center, and psychiatrists at University Mental Health Services). Note, confidential resources also include student health centers operated by the University, who have a professional practice of maintaining confidentiality with respect to patient communications. When seeking advice and support, persons who are concerned about confidentiality should discuss their concerns about confidentiality with the person with whom they are speaking. The following is a list of confidential resources. Information shared with confidential resources does not constitute a report or complaint filed with the University for the purpose of instituting an investigation or resolution of a sexual misconduct complaint.

Confidential Reporting for Other Offenses

Witnesses and victims of crime (other than sexual misconduct) who do not want to pursue action within the University or the criminal justice system may want to consider voluntarily making a confidential or anonymous report to their respective campus security offices, identified above. With some exceptions, as noted below, these officials can file a report on the details of the incident without revealing the victim’s identity. The purpose of a confidential report is to comply with a wish to keep the matter confidential, while taking steps to enhance the future safety of the University community. With such information, the University can keep an accurate record of the number of incidents involving students, employees and visitors; assess risk, determine where there is a pattern of crime with regard to a particular location, method, or assailant; and alert the campus community to potential danger. Reports filed in this manner are counted and disclosed in the annual crime statistics for the University and may be the subject of a timely warning, emergency notification, or other security notification to some or all of the campus community. Note, that for purposes of reports of sexual misconduct, campus security personnel are “responsible employees” who share with the Title IX Coordinator any report of sexual misconduct that they receive. As a result, any communication to campus security personnel could lead to a University investigation of the misconduct at issue.

Victims and witnesses should be aware that the University will strive to protect, to the greatest extent possible, the confidentiality of persons reporting or accused of crimes, and related information; however, the University cannot guarantee complete confidentiality where it would conflict with the University’s legal obligation to investigate a complaint or take steps to deter further crimes, or with its duty to comply with other legal obligations (e.g., responding to a subpoena).

Victims of crimes are encouraged to seek confidential counseling or treatment from the confidential resources listed above. The University does not have procedures to encourage counselors to raise the subject of reporting statistics confidentially and instead leaves the issue to the professional judgment of the counselor.
